

“A Final Cut”

A Zombie Game set in Japan

Main Character

Hao Sato, Japanese samurai descendent. His family died when he was young. He is known in his town for being lonely from a young age and for training his swordsmanship at his family's dojo many times. He has a good social standing and was about to get married out of love with a noblewoman called Aimi Ito, before the apocalypse broke out.

Weapons

Katana. He wears light armor to be fast and can pick up pieces of wood and throw them to distract zombies.

Period of Time

19th century, 1851, First year after the beginning of the Second Industrial Revolution.

Types of Zombies

Citizen Zombies: Normal Zombies, they can grab the player and deal a lot of damage;

Samurai Zombies: They wear an armor that has weak points, but their standards are the same as the normal ones;

Master Martial Artist Zombie: They have muscle memory of their old fighting style, they are like dojos bosses. By defeating them, it is possible to improve a basic stat according to the master's fighting style;

Zombie Sumo Fighter: They are rare and slow, but they tank a lot of damage. The closer to the shogun's house the stronger they all are;

Zombie Dogs: Dogs that were infected. Their life is shorter than the normal zombies, but are way faster, their damage is the same as the Citizen Zombies.

Zombie Focus

It will always be Hao unless they don't see him. You can only stay out of focus if stepping out of their sight for 5 seconds.

Objective

Find the zombie bride, Aimi Ito. It can be killed, but it must do much more damage than the rest of the zombies because he can't kill her. Then you must go to the shogun's house after the survivors. You must kill all the zombies, save the survivors and close the gates with them.

Improvements

Improvements come from killing the martial masters in the dojos, raising the stats that their combat style focuses on. It is also possible to get their scrolls and train the techniques by getting a sequence of buttons right, as well as its timing.

History

In 1851, the world had already started the Second Industrial Revolution, and with it a new material was discovered, the Compound Z, a material with high volatility that was being studied by the French government in Paris. But after almost 1 week studying the compound, it started reacting with its surroundings and eventually exploded, causing a large gas cloud that was composed by a virus that infected people all over the city and transformed them into beings that would be called zombies. The virus spread quickly all over the world and information about the virus did not come out fast enough to protect the people.

Eventually, it arrived in Japan, where Hao lives. He was sick while the virus spread in his city very fast. He did not sense it, and after a day of resting he got better, but when he looked through the window of his house, on the mountain near the city, he saw the city in flames. He put on his armor and took his katana in a rush. As he ran to the city, he encountered normal zombies that, even though hesitant, he had to kill them. When he reached the city, there were corpses lying on the ground and more zombies in the streets, so his first thoughts were to find Aimi. He had to walk all over the city to get to Aimi's house, which was near the Shogun's mansion. In the way, there were hidden zombies, as well as dojos and zombified animals. When reaching Aimi's house, he found her transformed into a zombie. He had to tie her in tears and leave, being unable to kill her (it is possible to kill her but it will take long, due to his love for her and his fear to lose her forever).

After facing Aimi, Hao ran to the Shogun's mansion in hope to find people. There were a lot of strong zombies that when alive tried to run to the mansion in the hope of surviving. When he reached the mansion, there were people fighting zombies. Hao decided to help them and they all together had to face all the zombies in the mansion while trying to close the gates and survive.
